WINGS OVER WASHINGTON

Journalism students attend west-coast convention

In early April, the students of GW's yearbook and newspaper programs had the opportunity to visit Seattle, Washington, for the National Journalism Convention. Each participant had access to interactive seminars on a wide range of journalism and media topics, and when each day was done, explored the beautifully rainy city of Seattle. Home to fresh seafood, iconic tourist attractions, and beautifully abstract art, there was never a dull moment. "My favorite part of Seattle was feeding the seagulls at Ivar's. It was such a unique thing to do." Kaleb Zimmer, freshman and managing editor of the yearbook, remarked. Chaperones and teachers Daniel Singer and Emily O'Ryan got in on the fun too, exploring Seattle culture with their students. "I loved the giant screens at the top of the Space Needle." O'Ryan shared. "They'd taken photos every day for two years, so we judged it to see how much it rains on average per week. It rains a lot." All in all, the spring excursion was an all-round success for the journalism teams, who will be taking their next adventure in Dallas, Texas in the fall. -Sawyer Markham

LESSARDS JOURNEY

Our adventure with Lessard throughout his new career

Principal Lessard has come to George to make a difference, starting as Assistant Principal two years ago. He believes that we are a high school where "every student is given the opportunity to succeed and is supported through that process." We wanted to know if he truly believed that he accomplished this goal, which he replied, "My first year has been the greatest opportunity to focus on quality instruction and needs of students. Great strides to fulfilling our promise to students and families that graduates will leave GW well prepared for encounters." In regards to the road he's taken, "My journey has been a great challenge but I have not ran into anything I feel has overwhelmed me or is impossible to accomplish. Also, along the way I've had support from students, teachers and community members who share my vision for a George Washington that works for all students." With the help of others he has been able to accomplish his visions for George and he asserted, "The responsibilities of this role compromise my time working directly with students and teachers. I look forward to spending more time supporting students directly." We have had an amazing year getting to know and see Lessard's adjustments. He also enjoyed this journey with George and all the students. Although it isn't over yet he wanted to conclude with sharing, "I continue to cherish the opportunity that has provided me in leading a school with such a rich tradition for success and the greatest students I have ever known." - Selena Carbajal & Mireya Enriquez

GWHS OPINIONS OF MR LESSARD

Sebastian Guzman, 11- "He was one of the best Principals that I have ever had. He has a very good sense of humor and is a very cool man."

Ariel Vasquez, 9- "He is super nice, fun and the only downer about him is that when he talks, he talks loud."

Francisco Santos-Garcia, 12 - "He could have improved as a Principal; he isn't around as much as the last Principal. He needs to engage more with the community at GW."

ASSASSINS

#DontTrustORyan2017

4 Every year, upperclassmen play a thrilling game of "Assassins", where there are a series of rounds you have to go through to win. To take out your opponent, you must get water on them. To succeed into the next round: avoid getting killed by your assassin and kill your target. This may seem easy, but there are also certain rules such as you can't get them on school grounds and you have to have a witness or else your kill doesn't count. When asked what tactics were used to win last year's game, Jane Stephens, 12, winner of last year's game and host of this year's game answered, "The way

I was able to get people out was telling as few people as possible who I had and not talking about it super often." Another tactic she used was always locking her car doors and never leaving her house unless she had to. John Woodliff-Stanley, 12, the other winner of last year's game, said, "I was very paranoid all the time." John explained that during the game, "I spent a good almost two weeks staying at a friends house to help evade my assassins." Good luck next year!

Track season this year is off to a great start. Tara Doublin is the coach for boys track team. Tara described this year's track team as a "Rookie Season due to the fact that we only have four returning athletes this season." They are doing extremely well so far and have managed to place against some stiff competition. Coach

Medendorp, gave us insight on why he chose to be a coach. The reasons include that he enjoys coaching track and also ran track in high school and college. He described this year's team as "a unique mix" because everyone is progressing, but there have been many injuries. Doublin says "If you gave 100% effort then you won that day." -Jennifer Navas

KRAKEN TAKE OVER

Robotics goes to competition

1. The robotics team poses for a group photo in Houston. Every year, the team known for the green shirts which depict the Kraken, getting ready to participate in a variety of challenges with their creations. 2. Here, the team poses with this year's robotic creation. Every year the team spends hours and hours after school working on and developing their robot to take to competition in hopes to be named the best of the best.

GW Robotics just finished their year with a competitive turnout competing in the National Championships in Houston, TX on April 18-21. If one has ever watched a robotics match, its incredibly exciting and slightly confusing if you have no one explaining to you what is occurring. As robotics deals with the design, construction, operation, and use of robots, as well as computer systems for their control, sensory feedback, and information processing these students really get into these competitions. The students and sponsors also competed in St. Louis, Missouri. Despite not taking home the prize they wanted, they did move forward in Houston to qualify for the Semi-Finals. Unfortunately they did not compete any further but this was the highest any team in Colorado had done at Nationals. We are confident they will continue winning moving forward into next year.

EMOTIONS LIFTED BY WHITE WINGS

Matthew Shepard's impact in theatrical format

This year's spring play, the Laramie Project, brought tears to the eyes of the entire audience that went to see it. In fact, during intermission the actors would flood to the backstage in tears due to the emotions this play caused. Not only was the Laramie Project one of the most heart wrenching performances the Patriots Players have ever put on the stage but it drew the most unique individuals to our theatre. The audience regardless of sexuality, gender, religion, or any other association was left awestruck by how our school's amazing actors conveyed this story of how a town and it's people have been affected by the horrendous hate crime that was the cause of Matthew Shepard's death in 1998. Despite the slight controversy among the staff and students about the theatre department even putting on a play dealing with such a heavy issue like sexual orientation, the Patriot Players put their hearts and souls into making the last play of the year the most powerful one yet. The magnitude of the intensity of this play was made even more so by it being in black box format which means the audience was on stage eye to eye with the actors. It drew many people within the school and outside as well to the harsh reality that being homosexual can make one the target of a hate crime and how that crime can affect the lives of everyone within a single town. The immersion of going to Laramie, Wyoming before the show helped guide the cast and crew towards success. Due to this being the last show for many seniors, the memories created throughout the process will not be leaving the hearts of this theatre family.

BEAUTIFUL CHAOS

IB art show invites the audience to feel again

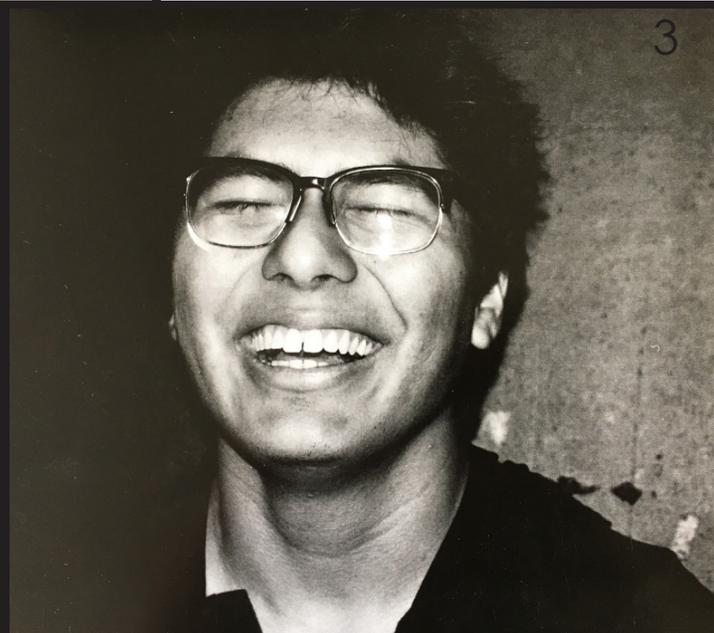

Art is a beautiful chaos, and so was the beginning of the IB art show. Artists are messy perfectionists, which their teacher, Emily O’Ryan knew. In the middle of the preparation, stress was heavily in place. To add to the chaos, spring break, the yearbook deadline, and the Seattle trip occurred in the middle of preparation. All the students thought that they were ready, but once they saw their neighbors work, competition kicked in. Exhibits that one might have overlooked were the collaborative piece that seniors Sonia Santos and Jordy Gertner worked on. For O’Ryan, she loved the videos displayed in Gertner’s exhibit due to “the idea of makeup covering everything is to show how we all have things to hide who are we.”

Another type of art that amazed O’Ryan was senior Maddie Dodge’s photographs of a diverse group of students, all of whom were laughing. Dodge caught people in the real element of laughter; it’s one thing we all have in common. One goal of the students, faculty, and administration were to find ways to bring us all together. For Dodge, she displayed laughter. -Julie Martinez

1. Jordy Gertner's cover project, the videos kept playing over and over. The emotion of Gertner conveyed made everyone at the show be sympathetic and emotional. 2. This was one of Dodge's acrylic painting, which showed taught her how to paint realistically. 3. Senior David Medina, caught in the real element of laughter photographed by Dodge. A collection of these photographs will be put into Lessard's office because it shows unity and equity amongst all cultures.

PREPARING FOR PROM

Getting ready for the big day

Getting ready for high school prom could be very time consuming and expensive. From preparing for that perfect promposal to spending a whole month in advance looking through the best makeup, hairstyles, and dresses, students take this day very seriously. Nonetheless, going through all the hassle is definitely worth it for seniors. For the perfect prom dress, one could go to Dillard's where the average cost ranges from $120 to $150. What would be someone's perfect makeup look, specifically how expensive is it? In a mix of high end brand and drugstore makeup, a full face could be done with the $127.70 you most likely don't have laying around. Finally, you can't be fully done without the hair. Beto's Salon is an amazing place to get it done for $75. With all these you can have fun in style. -Mariah Ramos

1. Senior Jade Zimmer and juniors Henry Hoffman, Dragosh Birlea, Cassidy Brown gathered together after the game against Montbello where Zimmer and Brown were asked to prom. 2. Junior Cole Sieblius took a different approach to ask his date by drawing a marina to ask out junior = Marina Barbera. 3. Dress shopping can be so stressful but the selfie helps to get opinions. Julie Martinez, 10, bought a prom dress at Dillard's for $96.04. It is an elegant dress and it's perfect for prom.

AWAITING THE PROM THEME

Have you waited for months to find out what the prom theme is? Well, you are not alone. This year, prom will be held at the Sports Authority Stadium, with the theme "Starry Night" We can't wait to go!

EARLY RISERS

JROTC earns 3rd in the state

On April 15th George Washington's JROTC Drill team & Honor Platoon were at the Rocky Mountain Regional JROTC Drill Competition early Saturday morning. In fact, they were the only team there at the Denver Coliseum at 6:45am, despite the competition taking place at 10am. Workers were setting up and the place was starting to awaken. Why were they there so early? Maybe it was an oversight in time but they wanted to be prepared. They went in with their Patriot Pride ready to show how far all their practice has taken them. Honor Platoon and drill teams competed, taking home, multiple awards showing 6th Battalion is the best. Overall they placed 3rd in Denver Public School and in state. A question asked to both GW teams, "As a team what was one of your best strengths for the 2016-2017 year and what is they team still struggling with?" Cadet Private First Class, Emily Medina stated, "We bonded as a group making us a better functioning team, resulting in having less drama but we still have to work on our bad attitudes though and not let it impact practice." Senior Eli Bartlett, Cadet Lieutenant Colonel explained, "We did best with repetition as a team to achieve alignment but we could spend more time improving and focus in practice." We are so proud of all our special teams members and can't wait to see how you improve next year.

TOUCHING ALL THE BASES

Say goodbye to our seniors and hello to the George JV team.

At George we have a huge brotherhood of baseball players. They stick together through thick and thin. Here are the only two seniors who played on the team this year, Robert Abeyta and Austin Ray. These two were part of making the baseball program a great program to participate. In the next picture is the JV baseball team. This team is full of love and support for one another, and we can't wait to see them flourish and hopefully play for their senior year as well.

1. Robert Abeyta, 12, and Austin Ray, 12, the only two seniors on the baseball team this year, pose together for the last picture they'll have together as a united George baseball team.
